Climbers killed in 100m fall

Mystery. RCMP may have to rely on fingerprints, vehicle registration to determine victims' identities

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Two rock climbers died Sunday afternoon after falling more than 100 metres down a steep ravine at a popular hiking spot near Canmore.

A witness told emergency workers that a man and woman believed to be in their early 20s were scaling a rock face near Heart Creek Trail, about 80 kilometres west of Calgary, when they fell.

The pair made contact with terrain about 20 to 25 metres down but ultimately ended up 100 metres or more below the rock face, said Calgary EMS spokesman Stuart Brideaux.

"Often, falls even greater than 10 feet in an unprotected environment can result in serious injury," he said. "Falls at significant heights, as in this, will usually result in multiple traumas and may not be survivable."

RCMP in Canmore were still working to identify the victims and notify next of kin on Sunday evening as neither were carrying licences or passports, said Cpl. Martine Renaud.

"We may have to take their fingerprints or use information associated with the vehicle left at the scene," she said.

Alpine helicopters were dispatched to retrieve the bodies.

Heart Creek Trail is a popular weekend venue for day trips, Brideaux said, adding many climbers were likely in the area at the time of the accident.

Motorsport. Police keep eye on plan for park

When officials roll out plans Monday for a proposed $27-million motorsports park in the Airdrie area, Calgary's police will be watching "very closely," says the deputy chief.

The Rockyview Motorsports Park will likely be located just off a highway northeast of Calgary, providing proper investment funds are secured and its development is approved by Rocky View County's council.

Representatives with the Motorsports, Arts Culture and Sports Group (MARCS), who were tasked with establishing a replacement park for Calgary's now-closed Race City, have long discussed partnering with Calgary police, who are in need of a new training track.

"If there's an opportunity for us to be a part of that — and it makes sense cost-wise with how the public's money is used — we will look at that," said Calgary deputy police Chief Roger Chaffin, who wouldn't say whether MARCS has approached him. "We will look at all options."

The deputy chief did say, however, the police would need their own track on the site, which sources have suggested could occupy 200 acres of a possible 3,000-acre development being pushed by the Calgary Aviation Land Corporation. Rocky View County voted against a new police driving track last year, which would have been included in a proposed multimillion-dollar training facility near Chestermere.

Motion. Alderman raises flag on business parking

One Calgary alderman wants to shift gears on parking rules for businesses moving into established communities.

Ald. Brian Pincott said the city needs to begin treating every area of Calgary differently when it comes to required parking spaces for establishments, and he plans to bring forward his concern during a council meeting Monday.

"How are we going to get the vibrant, mixed-use established communities we want if we have these crazy parking requirements?" he asked.

But not everyone was certain about Pincott's push.

Morley Flood is a co-owner at Kensington Fitness Studio, which expressed concerns last year that a competitor facility was moving in with 20 fewer parking stalls than typically required.

"There's no parking in Kensington, so obviously you have to have some give ... it's just a matter of how far you take it," he said.

Fire. Several homes badly damaged in Covewood Park

One home was destroyed and numerous others damaged after a fire broke out in a northeast Calgary community Sunday.

Just before 5 p.m. firefighters were called to Covewood Park NE.

Smoke could be seen billowing for miles and crews arrived to find one home fully engulfed in flames.

A second home had also caught fire but firefighters immediately went to work to keep damage to nearby residences minimal, according to a release.

The house where the fire began likely suffered irreparable damage to its main structure and the fate of the second home was unclear late Sunday.

Residents inside the homes were able to exit safely, but some were not allowed to return Sunday night.

Cause of the fire and damage estimate were still being investigated late Sunday.

Youngsters flock to folk music festival

An audience shift.
Younger people taking in 33-year-old festival, says artistic director

Before the first guitar strum, this year's Calgary Folk Music Festival was already sold out.

That was likely a first for the 33-year-old, four-day shindig on Prince's Island Park, which may have culminated into record crowds over the weekend.

"Folk isn't a dirty word anymore," said artistic director Kerry Clarke. "I am really seeing a lot more young people come out ... people are realizing what we are all about with the workshops we put on and are coming earlier."

But this year's festival didn't come without its share of hurdles. Originally planned Saturday headliner Sinead O'Connor pulled out in April forcing a scramble of sorts. Then, during the actual festival, afternoon showers Saturday sent many festival-goers running for shelter.

But that didn't stop thousands from coming out, including Jim Rea and his two sons Philip, 15, and Darren, 13. The youngsters have been taking in action on the mainstage since they were in diapers.

"It's a beautiful thing," Jim Rea said of the festival. "These guys would like a little more dub-step and hip-hop, but there's something for most people."

Attendees

13,000

About 13,000 people attended the Calgary Folk Music Festival each day this year — about the capacity for the festival site at Prince's Island Park.

Green radicals. RCMP names environmental groups as major threats

There is a "growing radicalized environmentalist faction" in Canada that is opposed to the country's energy sector policies, warns a newly declassified intelligence report.

The RCMP criminal intelligence assessment, focusing on Canadian waters, cites potential dangers from environmental activists to offshore oil platforms and hazardous marine shipments.

The report drew a sharp dismissal from Greenpeace — a prominent environmental group singled out in the document — which suggested it could simply be an effort by security authorities to tell the Harper government what it wants to hear.

The Canadian Press obtained a heavily censored copy of the September 2011 threat assessment of marine-related issues under the Access to Information Act.

The report was compiled by the Mounties with the combined input from the Canada Border Services Agency, Canadian Security Intelligence Service, Defence Department, Fisheries and Oceans and Transport Canada.

Government claims

"Criminal activity by Greenpeace typically consists of tresspassing, mischief and vandalism."

RCMP criminal inelligence assessment

"The Canadian law enforcement and security intelligence community have noted a growing radicalized environmentalist faction within Canadian society that is opposed to Canada's energy sector policies," says the report.

"Greenpeace is opposed to the development of Canada's Arctic region, as well as Canada's offshore petroleum industry. Criminal activity by Greenpeace activists typically consists of trespassing, mischief, and vandalism, and often requires a law enforcement response."

Yossi Cadan, campaigns director for Greenpeace Canada, said while group members sometimes trespass on private property to make their point, the group shuns violence. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Regime, rebels fight for control of Aleppo

Syria. Opposition calls for international support, regime blames neighbouring countries for destruction

Syrian tanks and artillery pounded rebel-held neighbourhoods in the commercial hub of Aleppo on Sunday in a bid to retake control as President Bashar Assad's regime accused regional powerhouses Saudi Arabia, Qatar and Turkey of trying to destroy the country.

Activists say opposition fighters control large swathes of territory across Syria's largest city. The government has been struggling for a week to beat back their assault and stem the tide of recent rebel advances in the civil war.

The head of the main opposition group, the Syrian National Council, called for international help in arming the rebels to face the regime's heavy weaponry, particularly tanks.

"If the international community cannot act, they should support the opposition with anti-tanks missiles and anti-aircraft rockets," Abdel Basset Sida told the Gulf News during a stopover in Abu Dhabi. "We seek international supporters to arm our uprising against the regime."

Saudi Arabia and Qatar have expressed willingness to help fund the rebels and they are believed to be funnelling money through Turkey to the opposition, which is using it to purchase arms and equipment.

Syrian Foreign Minister Walid al-Moallem railed against interference by the region's Sunni powers. He accused them of supporting the rebels at the behest of Israel.

"Israel is the mastermind of all in this crisis," he said during a joint news conference in Tehran with his Iranian counterpart. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel. Romney supports Jerusalem as capital, takes tough stance against Iran

U.S. presidential candidate Mitt Romney spoke aggressively Sunday about protecting Israel from Iranian nuclear threats and suggested that he was open to breaking with U.S. policy dating to 1967 by moving the United States embassy to Jerusalem if the Israelis asked.

Israel is the second of three stops on an international trip for Romney intended to burnish his foreign-policy credentials before he claims the Republican presidential nomination in late August.

Romney's speech was aimed at appealing to evangelical voters at home and to cut into U.S. President Barack Obama's support among American Jews. A Gallup survey of Jewish voters released Friday showed Obama with a 68-25 edge over Romney.

While Romney has been highly critical of Obama's policy toward Iran and the presumed threat to Israel, he has offered no specifics about how his policy would be substantially different.

Mitt Romney in Jerusalem Sunday. DAN BALILTY/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

But on the issue of the location of the U.S. embassy in Israel, which is in Tel Aviv, Romney told CNN that he thought the U.S. embassy should be moved from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem if the Israelis make that request. The Israelis have repeatedly sought such a move.

The issue has been a major diplomatic headache for the U.S., which has refused to make the shift because it would imply the sanctioning of Israel's incorporation of Arab East Jerusalem. The U.S. has refused to locate its embassy in Jerusalem out of its effort to be a trusted voice by both sides of the conflict.

Romney flatly called Jerusalem the Israeli capital in the very first words of his speech Sunday. And he had harsh words yet again for Iran, saying he respected Israel's right to defend itself against what Israel considers an existential threat.

"We will not look away nor will our country ever look away from our passion and commitment to Israel," said Romney. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Apple takes on Samsung in U.S. court

Pending. $2.5-billion US lawsuit over patents for iPhones, iPads

Two tech titans will square off in U.S. federal court Monday in a closely watched trial over control of the U.S. smartphone and computer-tablet markets.

Apple Inc. filed a lawsuit against South Korea's Samsung Electronics Co. last year, alleging the world's largest technology company's smartphones and computer tablets are illegal knockoffs of its popular iPhone and iPad products.

The Cupertino, Calif.-based company is demanding $2.5 billion US in damages, an award that would dwarf the largest patent-related verdict to date.

Samsung counters that Apple is doing the stealing and that some of the technology at issue — such as the rounded rectangular designs of smartphones and tablets — have been industry standards for years.

U.S. District Court Judge Lucy Koh in San Jose last month ordered Samsung to pull its Galaxy 10.1 computer tablet from the U.S. market pending the outcome of the trial.

The case is one of some 50 lawsuits among myriad telecommunications companies jockeying for position in the burgeoning $219-billion market for smartphones and computer tablets.

In the United States, U.S. District Court Judge Lucy Koh in San Jose last month ordered Samsung to pull its Galaxy 10.1 computer tablet from the U.S. market pending the outcome of the trial, though the judge barred Apple attorneys from telling the jurors about the ban.

Rating of Canadian banks drops from stable to negative

Standard & Poor's Ratings Services has cut its outlook from stable to negative on seven Canadian banks, over concerns about unsustainably high home prices and consumer debt levels, according to published reports Friday.

The Wall Street Journal said the New York debt-rating firm cut the credit ratings of Royal Bank of Canada, Toronto-Dominion Bank, Bank of Nova Scotia, National Bank of Canada, Laurentian Bank of Canada, Home Capital Group Inc. and Central 1 Credit Union.

The credit rater also reaffirmed the ratings on all seven banks, the Journal said.

However, S&P affirmed its ratings and maintained stable outlooks on five other Canadian banks including Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and Bank of Montreal.

Banks began to warn as early as the closing months of 2011 that consumer borrowing would slow as pent-up demand in the housing market becomes exhausted.

Meanwhile, low interest rates have been putting pressure on their bottom lines.

So, I've had to turn to NBC coverage of the London 2012 Summer Olympics, because my wife pipes up every time she hears about Canadian results on our country's networks.

She says she's tired of hearing sportscasters categorize a 17th-place result or fifth place in a semifinal as 'heartbreaking.' Just tell it like it is, she says — it's a disappointment.

I don't disagree with her; however, I do recall being surprised Saturday hearing of 'disappointing' results in mens' rowing and in swimming — from the mouths of Canadian broadcasters at that. Maybe it's a sign of things to come.

Good effort?

While we tend to be a 'rah-rah' nation that rewards the effort as much as the result, at some point we need to put our literal money where our mouth is.

While we tend to be a 'rah-rah' nation that rewards the effort as much as the result, at some point we need to put our literal money where our mouth is. With around $36 million ($24 million for summer sports and $12 million for team sports) being poured into preparation for the London Olympics, even the most patriotic sportsperson is likely to start scratching his or her head.

Own the Podium, the country's blueprint for athletic success at the Olympic Games, launched in 2004. We've seen measurable success: the 2006 Winter Olympics in Torino saw Canada land 24 medals, including seven gold. That's up from the 17 medals (seven gold) in 2002 in Salt Lake City. In 2010, Canada doubled its gold medal count to 14, but only managed two more overall medals compared with 2006, landing 26.

Over to the Summer Olympics side, Canada had 12 medals in Athens 2004 Games, and 18 in Beijing in 2008.

So, after funneling a serious chunk of taxpayer dollars into athletics, with the understanding there's a supposed plan for podium success, Canadians might start expecting several more inspiring wins, and fewer 'heartbreaks.'

The expectation for Canada during the London Games is to reach a top 12 finish in the medal standings. That could mean more medals than their Beijing showing — a tall task for a team better known for its snowboarding and speed skating than its skeet shooting or weightlifting.

Now, my wife could just be bellyaching about the homer Canuck sportscasters because she'd prefer to hear a spade called a spade, but she raises a reasonable point.

When will Canada, a country arguably providing more funding and focused planning for high-performance sports than ever before, not be merely satisfied with good intentions and efforts, but expect that their athletes bring home the number of medals relative to the money in their sport?

Sochi and Rio De Janeiro are up next. Only time will tell.

Tough competition for network during the Games

The International Olympic Committee says social media users caused problems for traditional broadcasters during the first big event of the London Olympics.

Television viewers watching the men's cycling on Saturday got little information about the riders' location and timings on the 250-kilometre road course.

Broadcasters blamed the Olympics Broadcasting Service for the glitch with GPS signals.

IOC spokesman Mark Adams says the broadcasting service was jammed by "hundreds of thousands" of people sending texts, pictures and updates to Twitter and Facebook.

Adams acknowledges that "we should have foreseen that."

The problem appeared to be solved in time for the women's road race on Sunday.

All the colours under the sun — in Russia

Meanwhile, in St. Petersburg, Russia over the weekend, the Holi celebrations finally arrived.

The festival of colours was delayed at first because boxes of coloured powder were stopped at customs, according to a Russian news report.

The news agency, rt.com, says the brightly coloured spectacle could become an annual event in Russia, citing a festival organizer.

The country is known to welcome anything out-of-the-ordinary. METRO

An Arnold-free Total Recall

New movie. The director discusses updating the Schwarzenegger hit — and reteaming with wife Kate Beckinsale.

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

Jessica Biel, left, a nd Colin Farrell star in Columbia Pictures' action thriller Total Recall. MICHAEL GIBSON

Director Len Wiseman has been working for quite some time on a remake of the 1990 Arnold Schwarzenegger vehicle Total Recall, based on a short story by Philip K. Dick. Of course, getting out from the shadow of a Schwarzenegger hit is no small feat, but Wiseman was up for the challenge. He sat down with Metro at San Diego Comic-Con to talk about his film's all-star cast — including his wife, Kate Beckinsale.

You've been at this production for a while.
It's been two and a half years.

Your wife and star, Kate Beckinsale, has said that living with you has proven that the director gets absolutely no time off.
She's very aware of it. It's one of the downsides. She sees how limited my time actually is, so I've often heard her say that from an actor's point of view, you want to be a little bit more selfish with your own questions and things, but if anything because we're married I find that she doesn't come to me as much as she generally would with another director because generally she feels for how incredibly overwhelmed I am with other things.

So, who would win in a fight between Jessica Biel and Kate Beckinsale?
It's a question that I can't ask. (laughs) To be really honest, if you knew these girls personally, they're very well-equipped with the action, just in terms of ability. And they're both quite vicious when they get into it. It was like having two stunt players on the movie, so we rarely brought a stunt person in for the fight stuff. I don't know who would win. I would really like to see it (laughs). If we just hold some kind of forum, I think it would do very well.

How do you decide which project will take over your life next?
I personally think you have to really, really fall in love with them. The best litmus for me is would I be upset if I passed on this and somebody else did it? I don't think you can go into any project that you feel a little bit iffy about because the minute that you do that — and I have done that before on a project — the amount that it asks of you is so great that you'll just start to break under how overwhelming it is. It's amazing how much adrenaline and passion can keep you awake, keep you going on a project.

In the original Philip K. Dick story, the main character is more of an everyman, something Arnold Schwarzenegger couldn't really pull off.
That was really a focus of what I wanted to do with the character.

At least for me, when I saw Total Recall in high school, I was going to go see an Arnold Schwarzenegger movie. I didn't know who Phillip K. Dick was. Arnold is already a superhuman-looking character from the beginning, so I was really wanting to create a character that felt a bit more accessible just as an everyman that turned into a superspy so that you could have more of that change.

Of course, Colin Farrell is by no means schlubby, though.
No, no.

But he was very thin, though. He definitely got himself ripped and in shape for the super-spy aspect of the character.

He was a great get because I needed somebody that was vulnerable and somebody that you connect with — but then when it became time to be that superhero kind of character and be tough and daring and all that, that you really bought that with the character, too. I think Colin really does occupy both of those qualities.

Jessica Biel

The actress says that before Justin Timberlake proposed, she didn't expect to ever get married.

- Engaged. The 30-year-old actress told The Associated Press on Friday that she feels wonderful about the engagement. Biel and Timberlake, 31, reportedly became engaged late last year but rarely speak publicly about their relationship. Biel called the engagement "wonderful. It's actually not anything I ever really thought was going to happen."

Dane Cook

Cook over the line with Batman shooting quip

Dane Cook learned the hard way that a week is probably not enough time to wait before making light of a tragedy. The comedian has taken to Twitter to apologize for making a joke about the Aurora, Colo., movie theater shooting, during which 12 people were killed when a gunman opened fire at a Dark Knight Rises screening.

"So I heard that the guy came into the theater about 25 minutes into the movie. And I don't know if you've seen the movie, but the movie is pretty much a piece of crap," Cook said during his set at L.A.'s Laugh Factory, according to Daily Caller.

"I know that if none of that would have happened, pretty sure that somebody in that theater, about 25 minutes in, realizing it was a piece of crap, was probably like, 'Ugh, f--ing shoot me.'" News of the joke caused an immediate uproar, prompting Cook to post to Twitter, "I am devastated by the recent tragedy in Colorado and did not mean to make light of what happened. I made a bad judgment call with my material last night and regret making a joke at such a sensitive time."

Stewart affair was not a one-time deal

THE WORD
Monica Weymouth
scene@metronews.ca

Kristen Stewart apologized for her "momentary indiscretion" with director Rupert Sanders, but it seems there is more to the story than the one-day fling that Us Weekly crashed last week.

According to Leopold Ross — the brother of Sanders' wife, Liberty Ross — the affair began last fall during the filming of Snow White and the Huntsman, which Sanders directed and Stewart starred in. "(Liberty) made some sacrifices for something she thought was worth it, now she knows, right?" Leopold tells UK newspaper The People. "Doubt it was worth it but it's life. It might actually make things better in the long run. She wasn't that happy for a while, but our family is close, she'll be all right." Pattinson, apparently, suspects Kristen is holding back. "Rob wants to have a man-to-man chat with Rupert to find out exactly what happened between him and Kristen," a source tells RadarOnline. "Kristen has already betrayed his trust by cheating, so he can't be sure that she will tell him exactly what went on between her and Rupert. The director has a wife and family to save, so Rob feels like he has nothing left to lose and would be honest with him."

Rob, before you get what's shaping up to be a rough play-by-play, we encourage you to remember this: You are Robert Pattinson and are surrounded by Hollywood starlets with less than nothing to lose. Choose your chat wisely.

Kate Middleton

A British Member of Parliament has suggested that Kate Middleton is pregnant, but it looks like nothing more than a case of wishful thinking.

"I think Kate Middleton is pregnant — and that would be good for the economy, MP Clair Perry said during an address at a school Friday, according to the Daily Mail.

But the Duchess of Cambridge herself doesn't seem to have gotten the news, as Middleton was spotted the same day looking slim and sipping wine at an Olympics reception.

Oh no, my child bullied...

Opinion ...another child with special needs, unknowingly. What would you do?

LINDSAY CROSS

One mom's daughter bullied someone with special needs / THINKSTOCK

My daughter is not a mean-spirited child. I realize that every parent who has ever existed believes this and I don't care. My little girl is a sweet child.

That being said, she's also a kid and there are things that she doesn't understand or hasn't been exposed to yet. And the first time that she encounters something new, there's the possibility that her strong voice or curious nature can lead to difficult circumstances. This was one of those times.

Brenna has attended the same daycare since she was a month old. Her provider normally has about six or eight children at a time of varying ages. And one family that my daughter has grown up with has a daughter with special needs.

I'm not exactly sure what Sarah's specific medical diagnosis is (I've changed her name here). I know that she has physical limitations and wears a back brace.

She's in late elementary school but has the comprehension and speech of a toddler. Sarah is normally a sweet child who has a tendency to invade personal space and misunderstand her own strength, but generally just wants to make people happy.

In the beginning, my daughter simply didn't understand that Sarah was different from other kids. When they were younger, it didn't matter.

Quote

"In the beginning, my daugher simply didn't understand that Sarah was different from other kids. This year, however, she became old enough to question the situation."

This year, however, my daughter finally became old enough to start questioning the situation.

One day, while the kids were playing, my inquisitive girl started asking why Sarah wore a diaper, eventually saying: "You're too big for a diaper. Babies wear diapers, Sarah. You can't wear a diaper unless you're a baby."

Sarah's feelings were understandably hurt. She started crying. Brenna remained confused.

It's hard for children to understand the effect their words can have.

At home, we had a long talk about special needs and disabilities. But about a week later, she asked why Sarah "looked funny" when she ran. She asked why she played with baby toys.

My teacher mother advised me to explain that "everyone has special needs. Some are things that doctors and teachers can help us fix, and some things they can't."

I got ready for our next talk, armed with a new more explanatory strategy. I tried to keep my voice calm, so that I didn't sound angry or condemning. She got impatient with all of the explaining I was doing. She suggested that we just draw her a card to say, "I'm sorry," and call it a day halfway through my planned lecture. I compromised by helping with the card but continuing the conversation as we coloured.

The good news is that my daughter hasn't had problems in a week. We'll have lots more talks about bullying with my daughter. It's a subject that no parent can afford to ignore.

But I have to admit, I never guessed that our first talk would cast my daughter as the aggressor.

Fifty Shades sex has some expecting

Will little Sophia and Jacob morph into baby Christian and Anastasia about nine months from now?

While it's impossible to declare a Fifty Shades of Grey baby boomlet, some moms and moms-to-be attribute their pregnancies to sex inspired by the erotic trilogy that went mainstream early this year.

One night on vacation in Florida was all it took for Betsy Bailey, a labour and delivery nurse, no less, in suburban Chicago. She's expecting baby number six, conceived soon after reading the steamy bondage love story.

"It was like one night alone," she laughed. "We went out to dinner and, you know, a little wine, a little stone crab and a little Christian Grey."

Bailey's No. 6 is due Christmas Day, her 42nd birthday. She and her husband always knew they wanted a big family, but they thought big would be four kids.

"We picked up our fifth in Mexico. He was a vacation baby as well," she joked. "We call him the worm at the bottom of the tequila bottle."

Christian and Ana aren't on her name list, though her great-grandmother's maiden name, Gray, had been a possibility — until now. "Now I don't think I could do it," Bailey said.

Brittany Woodard, 21, in Norfolk, Va., has a six-month-old son, Greyson, whose name has absolutely nothing to do with the books Woodard read while her military husband was away for four months.

New to the spicy genre, the stay-at-home mom wasn't trying for another baby so soon, but she was ready with "new ideas" in the boudoir department when her husband got home. She's due in February.

At BabyCenter.com, a large online community of moms and expectant moms, nearly 150 women have posted that their pregnancies are directly related to more baby-making activity inspired by the best-selling books that have sold 31 million copies in all formats.

That's amore! Potato salad gets the magic Italian touch

This recipe serves 10. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This year, take a basic vinegar potato salad to the next level by adding all the trimmings you'd typically expect on an Italian grinder.

The funny thing is, some people like their grinders with vinegar, some prefer mayonnaise. And you can have it your way with this salad, too. If you'd prefer a creamy version, substitute 1/2 cup mayonnaise for the 1/4 cup of vinegar and 6 tablespoons of oil used for the dressing in this recipe. You'll still need 2 tablespoons of oil for the onions.

1. In a pot, combine sweet potatoes and russet potatoes. Add enough water to cover by 1 inch. Bring to a boil and cook until just tender, about 15 minutes. Drain and spread out on a rimmed baking sheet to cool.

2. In skillet over medium-high, heat 2 tablespoons of olive oil. Add onions and rosemary, then sauté until browned, about 15 minutes. Transfer onions to a bowl, then return skillet to heat. Add chopped salami and sauté until browned at edges and beginning to crisp, about 5 to 7 minutes. Add to onions.

3. In a small bowl, whisk together the remaining 6 tablespoons of olive oil, garlic, vinegar, sugar and mustard. Once the onions, salami and potatoes have cooled, add the potatoes to the onion mixture. Add the provolone and cherry peppers, then drizzle the dressing over everything and gently stir until well mixed and evenly coated. Season with salt and pepper.

4. Refrigerate for at least 2 hours to allow the flavours to meld.

Good job. Males settling in to a female-fronted industry that pays well

Pink collar jobs, while not top-earning careers, are typically well-paid jobs, many of which do not need long-term education which can get costly. The median annual wage of a nurse in May 2010 was $64,690 in the United States.

According to PayScale.com the U.S. average hourly rate of a nanny is $8 to $17 an hour, which is well above minimum wage for many cities.

When Mark Bala, an operating room nurse in the Philippines, was in high school and had to declare a major for college, he immediately put down nursing. His grandfather, who lived in the United States, told him that being a nurse was a good way to support a family. But, after Bala failed to get into the popular major, he chose a different career path and ended up as a research assistant for an environmental firm for a year and a half.

Then, Bala found out he had to undergo major surgery. A college friend who had graduated with his 2001 class who had returned to school to pursue nursing encouraged Bala to re-enroll after he recovered. His aunt also broached the idea because she noticed that nursing was become a popular career in the both in the United States and the Philippines.

"Our family wasn't that well to do," he explained. "It was love for the family. I just wanted to have a better future for my family."

Doctor? No, I'm a 'murse'

Careers. Welcome to the world of the male nurse. More men are taking pink collar jobs stereotypically reserved for women

MICHELLE CASTILLO
life@metronews.ca

I'm not a doctor, I'm a murse / THINKSTOCK.COM

Jeffery Peralta is a nurse who works in pediatric care at the Children's Recovery Center of Northern California (CRC), as well a pediatric primary and urgent care nurse at the Santa Clara Valley Medica Center, East Valley Clinic near San Jose, Calif.

"There is a spectrum of reactions that I get when I tell people that I am a nurse," Peralta tells us.

"One of my favourites is, 'Why didn't you just become a doctor?' There are people who also look at nursing in a different light and respect my profession as an esteemed role within the medical model."

At one point, people might have questioned his career choice for a different reason: the fact that he's a 25-year-old man in a typically female profession.

But, he's actually joining a growing number of American men who are taking up pink collar jobs — careers typically dominated by women.

According to a recent New York Times' analysis of U.S. census data, one-third of all job growth for men between 2000 and 2010 occurred in careers that were more than 70 per cent female.

One of the most stereotypical pink collar jobs is nursing. Male nurses are often given the nickname 'murse,' but with slowly increasing numbers that may change.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that in 2011, 290,000 of nursing, psychiatric, and home health aides were men and 1,900,000 were women. Looking at the nursing field specifically, the Health Resources and Services Administration — which publishes data on nurses in the United States every four years — said 6.6 per cent of the nurses in the United States in 2008 were males.

When you take into account that there were just about 45,000 registered male nurses in the 1980s and about 168,000 registered male nurses as of 2008, it's a giant leap.

While the overall increase of men who are taking pink collar jobs has only been proven in the U.S., several other countries are seeing more men choosing certain pink collar occupations.

In the U.K., 52 per cent more men applied to teach primary school students and now make up 30 percent of the applicants, according to Training and Development Agency for Schools.

As for nursing, 13 per cent of the University of Calgary's fall 2011 nursing program was male, the highest number of men they've seen interested in the course.

According to the Canadian Nurses Association, male nurses have doubled in the last decade and now make up six per cent of the work force. The Australian Institute of Health and Welfare also reported an increase of male nurses from 7.9 per cent of the workforce in 2005 to 9.6 percent of the workforce in 2009.

On Peralta's team at CRC, seven members of the group are men whereas the other 29 members are women.

Numbers are similar in his other job where he is one of the four men out of the 19-person team.

"There is a spectrum of reactions that I get when I tell people that I am a nurse," Peralta tells us. One of my favourites is, 'Why didn't you just become a doctor?'

Work culture. Are men discriminated against?

Just because there are more men taking pink collar jobs doesn't mean that both men haven't noticed that their gender hasn't played a role in how people treat them. The male nurse interviewed above, Jeffrey Peralta, who is a homosexual man, says he often feels dominated by the women in his job.

He said he doesn't speak up because he's often afraid of retaliation.

"I feel that I have been passed up on promotions because of favouritism between female staff nurses and members of upper management who are also women, despite the excellent care that I give to my patients," Peralta said.

"I have always felt that I have been part of the minority in my personal life, and my role in my professional life is no different."

Peralta, Male nurse

Mark Bala, an operating room nurse in the Philippines, stated that the public normally doesn't have a problem accepting the fact that he's a male nurse. He has noticed, however, that some doctors prefer female nurses over male nurses.

"I know one doctor who's always hot tempered when one of his team is a male nurse," he said. "If a female nurse is assisting him he's very calm and his demeanor changes." METRO

Overcoming gender stereotypes in the office

Don't give stereotypes a reason to survive. ISTOCK

Gender stereotypes can be a severe hindrance to your work. They can also distract from serious issues and affect a person's comfort level. "Women who unwittingly adhere to gender stereotypes are less likely to be taken seriously for their abilities and contributions," explains Lahle Wolfe, About.com's Guide to Women in Business. It's time to stop stereotypes in their tracks and move forward.

Where to begin? "Be excellent," insists Brenda Fiala, Strategy SVP at Blast Radius. "Set for yourself an expectation of delivering excellent work, and strive to do it positively and consistently," she says.

When you're a good employee it gets noticed, regardless of sex. "Your role," explains Wolfe, "is to contribute to the success of the business. If you are not doing that first, you will be hard-pressed to blame gender discrimination."

Many professionals stress the importance of an appropriate wardrobe. If you want to be seen as a vital contributor to the company, you'd better look the part. "Dress professionally, not for going out," says Fiala. "Professional attire that you are comfortable in builds confidence." This doesn't mean dress like a man — it means keep it clean.

"To break a stereotype you have to live outside it first," says Wolfe. Observe and understand what stereotypes you may be falling into and make them a thing of the past. JULIA WEST, MWN

Say no to silliness

If there's a stereotype that you find offensive or degrading, simply don't perpetuate it.

- Someone says that women are gossipy? "Do not engage in gossip, no matter how tempting." This advice comes from the authors of Mean Girls at Work: How to Stay Professional When Things Get Personal, Katherine Crowley and Kathi Elster.
- Or maybe you know someone who insists that female bosses are moody or rash. "You can be a strong leader by laying out expectations clearly and giving direct feedback," write Crowley and Elster.

Piercy learns to love golf course on his way to title

Golf. American wins Canadian Open by one shot at course that demanded 'boring golf'

As it turns out, there is nothing boring about a victory at golf's third-oldest championship.

Or a cheque for $936,000 US.

Or a trip to the Masters.

Scott Piercy learned to love Hamilton Golf and Country Club in Ancaster, Ont., just a little bit more Sunday while pulling off a comeback victory at the RBC Canadian Open. The man who entered the weekend bemoaning the "boring golf" he was forced to play on a classic layout ended up being all smiles when the trophy was presented.

"At the end of the week if the score is good, it is exciting," said Piercy. "So I'm pretty excited."

The Las Vegas native closed with a 3-under 67 to edge William McGirt (69) and Robert Garrigus (70) by a shot.

Those men spent the final day locked in a see-saw battle and each of them found their name atop the leaderboard at one point.

Piercy's winning score of 17-under 263 matched the tournament scoring record established by Johnny Palmer at Winnipeg's St. Charles Country Club in 1952.

DeLaet top Canadian

Graham DeLaet's final round at the RBC Canadian Open was over before the leaders even teed off, but he didn't go home empty-handed from his national championship.

The golfer from Weyburn, Sask., closed with an even-par 70 at Hamilton Golf and Country Club on Sunday to claim the Rivermead Cup as low Canadian at the event.

Long ball ruins solid outing from Cecil

Home runs continue to be a problem for Toronto Blue Jays left-hander Brett Cecil.

This time it was a three-run shot by Jhonny Peralta in the second inning Sunday as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Blue Jays 4-1 to avoid a three-game sweep.

Peralta also hit a solo homer against reliever Joel Carreno in the ninth to back Doug Fister's eight strong innings.

Cecil (2-4) has allowed nine home runs in his eight starts since returning from the minors and Peralta's sabotaged a decent outing in which he allowed four hits, three walks and three runs while striking out seven in 6 2/3 innings.

"I'm not going to change anything," Cecil said. "I don't care how they get the runs. It doesn't matter as long as I keep my team in it."

The victory snapped Detroit's three-game losing slide, with the last two coming in Toronto, and ended the Blue Jays' three-game winning streak.

"I thought Brett did his job keeping us in the game, particularly after the three-run homer in the second. He settled down," Toronto manager John Farrell said. "I think overall in the series we pitched very well."

Diving pair get Canada on the board

Emilie Heymans, front, and Jennifer Abel compete in the three-metre springboard final on Sunday. LEFTERIS PITARAKIS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Synchronized diving. Heymans' medal haul reaches historic proportions after bronze win with partner Abel

Her career was forged over more than two decades of training, of six-hour sessions, of 80 dives a day, five days a week.

If Emilie Heymans decides to retire after the London Olympics, she's going out in fitting fashion.

The St. Lambert, Que., diver captured Canada's first medal of the Games with partner Jennifer Abel on Sunday, launching herself into the history books in the process.

The Canadians won bronze in the three-metre synchronized event, a result that makes Heymans the first female diver and first Canadian summer Olympian to reach the podium in four consecutive Olympic Games.

"I couldn't have ever imagined diving in four Games, or being in this position at 30," Heymans said.

Heymans won silver in the 10-metre synchro in 2000, bronze in the same event in Athens in 2004, and a silver in the 10-metre individual event four years ago in Beijing.

Heymans and Abel had silver in their sights Sunday, sitting in second place behind Chinese world champions Minxia Wu and He Zi after the first dive. But they were jostled by television cameras when they were practising on the pool deck before their second dive — a moment Heymans said burst their bubble of focus.

They were noticeably out of sync on the board in Dive 2 — a forward dive in pike position, normally an easy feat for the duo — and fell to fifth place.

"I think both of us, in our head it was like: 'What's going on, what's going on?'" Heymans said. "But after we were able to calm down and come back to the competition and we know it's never over until the last dive."

Heymans and Abel, a 20-year-old from Laval, Que., battled back to win bronze with 316.80 points. Wu and Zi of China led from start to finish to take the gold with an overall score of 346.20. Americans Kelci Bryant and Abigail Johnston captured silver with 321.90.

Heymans, who is also competing in the individual three-metre springboard event in London, will decide her future following the Games.

She said she might dive one more year. It won't be an easy decision for a woman who has trained at least 20 hours a week since she was seven.

"Actually sport is my entire life, it's what I've been doing since I was six years old. I think I'm going to carry this baggage for the rest of my life," she said, meaning it in a good way.

A child of sporting parents — dad Eric played soccer in Belgium, and mom Marie-Paule Van Eyck competed in Montreal's 1976 Olympics as a member of the Belgian fencing team — the diver was originally a gymnast who was told by coaches she was too tall for that sport.

Her parents encouraged her to try diving.

"At first I didn't want to try. I didn't even want to go to the pool because I loved gymnastics, so I didn't want to quit and I hate being wet, I hate being in the water and I'm always cold," she said.

Breaking through

A medal on Day 2 of full day of competition is good news for a Canadian team aiming for a top-12 finish overall, and takes some pressure off the rest of the squad.

- Canada went seven days without a medal in Beijing before the men's rowing pair and wrestler Carol Huynh ended the drought on Day 8 with silver and gold, respectively. Wrestler Tonya Verbeek also added a bronze that day.
- In 2004, Heymans and partner Blythe Hartley's bronze was the lone medal in the opening seven days.

Swimming. Van Beilen loses swim-off for chance to compete in 100m final

Another day, another drama for Canada's swim team at the Olympic Games.

Tera Van Beilen of Oakville, Ont., made her Olympic debut in the 100-metre breaststroke Sunday, and had to compete in one more race than she'd expected.

The 19-year-old had a swim-off against Alia Atkinson of Jamaica late in the evening, when the Aquatic Centre stands had largely emptied, to determine who would claim the eighth spot in Monday's final.

The two women had identical times and finished tied for eighth in the semifinal, requiring a rare head-to-head almost two hours later to solve the deadlock. Atkinson prevailed, dropping Van Beilen to ninth and one spot out of the final in her third race of the day.

"It was mentally hard coming off a race and knowing you had to do it again," Van Beilen said. "I feel blessed for the opportunity to have swum again. It wasn't how I would have liked it to turn out. I gave it everything I had."

It was the second strange turn of events for Canada in as many days. Ryan Cochrane thought he would race in the men's 400 freestyle final Saturday, but a disqualification of world and Olympic champion Park Tae-hwan in the heats was reversed.

Canada's Tera Van Beilen reacts to Sunday's loss. THE CANADIAN PRESS

That bumped the Victoria swimmer from the final eight and out of the running for a medal. Cochrane will get another chance in Saturday's 1,500-metre freestyle, which is a distance he won Olympic bronze in four years ago.

Canada emerged from the opening weekend of swim competition still looking for a medal. Their goal is three medals and swimmers in 13 to 15 finals.

Toronto's Brittany MacLean was the first to make a final Sunday. The 18-year-old was seventh in the women's 400-metre freestyle, a promising result for a teenager in her first Olympics. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nova Scotia's Clayton makes statement vs. Mexico's Molina

Clayton avenged a loss at the 2010 Pan-American championships to Molina, the brother of 2008 U.S. Olympian Javier Molina.

"I think I did amazing," said the Dartmouth, N.S., native.

"All the hard work has paid off."

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Today's Sun-Pluto link means you will need to take care of something you should have taken care of a long time ago. You won't get a third bite of the cherry, so knuckle down and get it right.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
The cosmic trends have been good to you in recent months but don't start thinking you can do as you please and get away with it. Money matters, especially, will need to be dealt with cautiously this week.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
If there is something that is worrying you — and there undoubtedly is — you must share your fears with those you love and trust. You don't have to suffer in silence. You don't have to suffer at all.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Do you really believe in something, or did you copy a friend's idea because it sounded good at the time? If it's the latter today's Sun-Pluto link will force you to face up to its inconsistencies.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may be tempted to break the rules to get ahead of a rival but the planets warn that's not a good idea. Even if it works in the short-term you will lose out in the long-term. It's all about trust.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
The grass may look greener on the other side of the fence but you should know by now that looks can be deceptive. Wherever you are at the moment is where you are supposed to be.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
A belief you have never questioned before will begin to worry you today. Could it be that it's incorrect? Could it be you have been looking at it from the wrong angle? Yes it could, so look again.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
A relationship is now at a turning point and by the time Thursday's full moon comes around you will have made a fateful decision. Will it be the right one? It's right for you and that's what matters.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Be nice to your rivals today. If nothing else it will confuse them and make them believe you have some dastardly plan up your sleeve. Confusion leads to mistakes; mistakes lead to opportunities.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
The approaching full moon is making you more touchy than usual and if you are observant you will notice that some people seem to be steering clear of you.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Your trust in someone has gone through the floor and you doubt you will ever get back to where you were before. Maybe you're right but time is always a healer and deep down you still have feelings for them.
